Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 18 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain arriving in the morning, turning drier later.

Today:
A wet start as a band of rain arrives from the west, heavy at times and spreading across the region. Rain clearing during the afternoon, followed by a mix of bright spells and scattered showers. Feeling mild, winds strengthening. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Tonight:
Mostly dry and cloudy during the evening with the odd shower possible for the north. Staying dry with clear skies overnight. Rather mild and windy. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Friday:
A largely dry and cloudy morning with outbreaks of rain arriving during the afternoon, heavy at times. Staying cloudy during the evening, with further outbreaks of rain. Windy throughout. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Band of rain arriving on Saturday, persists throughout the day but eases overnight. Largely dry but rain over the west for Sunday. Dry with clear spells on Monday. Feeling mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.